

ENERGY SECURITY IN EUROPE

Towards Mediterranean gas hubs ?

Thursday, 2 April 2015 3.30 pm – 6.30 pm

VENUE

TUSIAD

TURKISH INDUSTRY & BUSINESS ASSOCIATION
REPRESENTATION TO THE EUROPEAN UNION
Avenue des Gaulois, 13 1040 Brussels

Energy security is a priority of the Energy Union. What are the objectives? To reduce our energy costs, consumption of fossil fuels, greenhouse gas emissions? To end our energy dependence vis-à-vis Russia? These questions arise in a context of declining global crude oil prices, in a complex and tense regional context, with a reconfiguration of alliances between countries in the region (Russia / Turkey / Caspian Sea/ Middle East / North Africa), and European situation made even more difficult with the Greek question.

Europe proposes to diversify sources and supply routes and strengthen dialogue with North Africa and the Eastern Mediterranean to build a gas hub in southern Europe: Algeria, Turkey? Should we not also resume dialogue with Russia and rethink interdependencies to go to new relationships and cooperation with all countries in the area? To answer these questions and give us their analysis, we appeal to:

Houda ALLAL, Director General of OME - Mediterranean Observatory of Energy
Samuele FURFARI, European Commission
Abdenour KERAMANE, former minister of mines and industry of Algeria
Rashad NOVRUZ, Mission of Azerbaijan to the EU
Cenk PALA, Trans-Adriatic Pipeline Turkey representative
Dimitry SEMENOV, Russian mission to the EU

Looking forward to seeing you in this meeting.

Sincerely,

Claude Fisher, Director of ASCPE-Les Entretiens Européens
Bahadir Kalegasi, President of the Bosphorus Institute and Representative of TUSIAD to the EU
Marat Terterov, Executive Director of Brussels Energy Club
